CDTV on the Rough Ridge Trail

If you've only hiked/worked on the Rough Ridge Trail in the summertime, it can feel like a green tunnel. However, in the wintertime, it has a completely different feel, with lots of visible elevation rising and falling from the trail and plenty of views through the forest to the surrounding mountains. CDTV hit the trail on a gray day to tackle waterbars and dips while enjoying the scenery around this interior trail. Robert Edmondson, first-time volunteer Jon Larimer, John Desmond, Charles McCullough, Chris Phillips, John Berry, John Franetic and his grandson Jeremiah took care of approximately 2.5 miles of the southern end of the trail. A big thumbs-up to Charles and Jon, who constructed waterbars similar to the ceiling in the Sistine Chapel.....and TWO big thumbs-up to 11-year-old Jeremiah Franetic, who hiked almost 8 miles round trip with about a 600' climb out from the turnaround point!

Many thanks to all our volunteers who worked hard to maintain a beautiful trail. We hope to see many of you on another workday in the near future.

Volunteers about to embark on the workday.
